Marking Board Qualitative Comments

1. Similar to the 2012 World History 3201 exam, very few questions were omitted by students. Some answers had more in depth responses than in previous years (e.g. question 51).
2. Students sometimes only referenced what they saw in the visual. Students who performed better connected the question to the visual.
3. Some students restated the quotation(s), statistics and question rather than providing a developed answer.
4. Students sometimes provided an example(s) but needed to extend and support their responses to attain full marks.
5. Some students wrote full essays with few specifics and inaccurate historical facts (e.g. question 53).
6. When students are asked to evaluate (make a judgment call) it is important that they take a position and provide support. It must be more than an opinion.
